

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

THE LUNCHEON CLUB.

At the Tuesday luncheon of the Luncheon Club President Garland Martin presided. The meal was preceded by a beautiful selection sung by the Hondo Glee Club's Octette, Jack Muennink accompanying at the piano.

Following the luncheon Mr. J. E. Ruckman, Field Representative of the Houston Federal Farm Loan Bank, addressed the membership briefly on the work of the bank. He stressed the fact that the bank desires to extend all the favors within its power to those borrowers who are hard pressed to meet payments, and emphasized the importance of not giving up in these hard times but to keep up a spirit of never despair. His remarks were favorably received by those who heard him.

HONDO LOSES VALUABLE PEOPLE.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Mechler were here the first of the week and completed the removal of the rest of their household goods to Castroville where they will make their future home, and where Mrs. Mechler will follow her profession of nursing.

Mr. and Mrs. Mechler came to Hondo a number of years ago where for a long time Mrs. Mechler pioneered in maintaining the Hondo Hospital, and many a sufferer owes a debt of gratitude, both to her professional skill and to the goodness of a kind and sympathetic heart, for the alleviation of their pain.

While regretting their departure all unite in wishing them success and contentment in their new home.

FREE SHOW COMING.

G. C. Loomis, Manager of the Allerita Loomis Players, a dramatic troupe that has visited Hondo before, was here Wednesday and arranged to stage a free open air show on the plaza on next Trades Day, June 8. The show will be free to all attendants and is another added attraction for that day. This free attraction alone will be worth coming miles to see, to say nothing of the opportunity offered by Hondo merchants to participate in the division of valuable trade premiums.

Don't forget the date, June 8th, and be on hand.

MEDINA COUNTY FAIR DIRECTORS MEETING.

At regular meeting of the Directors of the Medina County Fair, it was decided to have their annual Fair two days, Thursday and Friday, 10th and 11th of November, 1932.

They hope that the public will cheerfully give their assistance to make this year's Fair a pleasing and beneficial success.

By C. M. Merritt,
Secretary.

Lancaster for his comforting words at the funeral of our beloved husband and father, John Edward Allen.

Gratefully yours,
Mrs. J. E. Allen,

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK.

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Oklahoma.

Business today requires great care and intelligence in order to conduct it successfully.

Many business concerns never figure on slack periods and wake up too late.

Men who use brains and level-headed judgment have found out that modern business methods must be used in securing and keeping business all seasons of the year.

If they don't keep abreast of the times they won't be in business long.

Many business concerns must wake up to the fact that in paying nothing for advertising they are getting nothing back in the way of business, and are really paying a great deal in loss of business.

QUALITY GOODS WELL ADVERTISED BUILD A REPUTATION THAT ASSURES SUCCESS.

A BUSINESS THAT IS PERSISTENTLY ADVERTISED COMMANDS A WORTHWHILE STANDING IN A COMMUNITY.

THE BETTER A BUSINESS IS ADVERTISED THE BETTER IT WILL BE KNOWN AND LIKED, BECAUSE ITS ADVERTISING IDENTIFIES IT AS A GOOD PLACE TO TRADE.

If Your Customer is not reading your ad in this paper he is reading your competitors somewhere else.

THE SCHOOL IS OUT!

THE HONDO HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES A CLASS OF TWENTY-TWO.

The 1931-32 term of the Hondo High School came to a successful termination last Tuesday night when sixteen girls, were given their High School diplomas. Miss Mary Lois Barnes was the Valedictorian and Miss Elva Mumme, Salutatorian. Mr. Jack Muennink was high point boy.

The personnel of the class was as follows: Adolf Balzen, Mary Lois Barnes, Dwyce Cameron, Lucy Davis, Margaret Dillon, Dorothy Ann Eckhart, Eleanor Heyen, Evelyn Kimmey, Jeanette Merritt, Irene Mechler, Jack Muennink, Elva Mumme, Hedwig Nester, Irene Neumann, Vivian Neumann, Russell Speece, Naomi Steinle, Lyla Strawn, Jean Ulbrich, Lucille Van Fleet, Thelma Wilson and Robert Zuberbuehler.

The graduating exercises came as the grand finale of the commencement week which was ushered in with a May Festival by the music and art pupils on Friday night, May 13, mention of which was made in our last issue.

On Friday night, May 20th, the class play was given before a large and appreciative audience.

The play, "Who Wouldn't Be Crazy", had for its setting a fashionable sanitarium for the treatment of nervous diseases. The hero, Jack Muennink, found himself incarcerated in the institution as a result of mistaken identity. While there he falls in love with the heroine, Miss Irene Mechler, a visitor at the institution. In the meantime he finds among the patients the sweetheart, Miss Irene Neumann, of a friend of his, Vivian Neumann, and brings them together to the complete restoration of the health of the girl and the happiness of both. In doing so, however, he is indirectly the cause of the heroine's being kidnapped, very much to the distress of the Superintendent, Russell Speece; Charley Embury, a director of the institution; and the head nurse, Miss Lyla Strawn. In the melee, however, the hero outwits his nemesis Policeman Jean Ulbrich, and takes the heroine from the kidnappers and at the same time away from her admirer, Adolf Balzen, who is "consoled", however, by the attentions of the heroine's three friends Misses Lucille Van Fleet, Margaret Dillon and Mary Lois Barnes. Robert Zuberbuehler and Miss Thelma Wilson as inmates, Frank Rucker as colored utility boy and Miss Lucy Davis as colored maid furnished the comical phases of a play which, on the whole, went over in a big way to the delight of the large audience.

Clarinet specialties by Miss Jeanette Merritt entertained the audience between acts.

At eleven o'clock Sunday morning, the Baccalaureate services were conducted at the Auditorium. Rev. R. W. Merrill led the Invocation; Rev. P. E. Lancaster read an appropriate Scripture selection; and Rev. Garland J. Parrish, Pastor of the First Christian Church of Uvalde, preached the Sermon. This masterly discourse will be published in an early issue of this paper.

Following the sermon, Rev. W. C. Leibfarth pronounced the Benediction. The choir was under the direction of Music Director Ed. Armstrong and furnished delightful music for the occasion.

On Monday night The Senior Class of Hondo High School observed a night of fun and frolic with the following program:

Class History, Lucille Van Fleet.
Class Sayings, Thelma Wilson.
Piano Solo, Jack Muennink.
Class Prophecy, Lucy Justine Davis.

Class Advice to Faculty, Jeanette Merritt.

Class Song, Margaret Dillon.
Class Poem, Irene Neuman.
Class Will, Dorothy Ann Eckhart.
Presentation of Key, Frank Rucker and Joe Haegelin.

As we have promised to publish the class papers read on this occasion, we omit any comment here.

In what was the prettiest event of all, the school closed Tuesday night with appropriate graduating exercises. Rev. C. P. Haaskarl led the Invocation. Then followed rapidly the Salutatory by Miss Elva Mumme, the Valedictory by Miss Mary Lois Barnes, the Baccalaureate Address by Hon. C. S. Slatton of San Antonio, and the presentation of diplomas by Vice-President Henry Merriman of the School Board.

Judge Slatton's speech was an eloquent appeal to the graduates to maintain lofty ideals and fix their purpose on high endeavor in life.

A piano solo by Jack Muennink and a song by the Glee Club Sextet, gave variety and interest to the program.

And thus closes the 1931-32 term of the Hondo High School. Every citizen of Hondo feels an honest pride in the achievements of our school and congratulates the graduates on being eligible, because of their graduation, to entrance into any of the state's colleges, the school having full affiliation.

The closing of this term is of peculiar interest to the Managing Editor of this paper, as his baby girl is the last of his four children to receive a diploma from the institution, and we are sure each one takes with them a lasting affection for their Alma Mater.

ELITE BRIDGE CLUB.

Mrs. Nora Bendele entertained the Elite Bridge Club at bridge last Friday afternoon. A color scheme of orange and white was carried out, the floral note featured being cape jasmine and sweet peas.

Little wonder, too, for kindly Seth satisfies completely the craving of the heart for goodness, peace and faith. Think of it! A young man, only twenty-nine years of age, and yet people write, "Your program is of more spiritual beauty and worth than all the sermons preached in the entire country." And letters—not hundreds, but hundreds of thousands of them—come to him—and testify to millions of hearts he has stirred. "In my opinion," said Representative Snow, who introduced Seth Parker to Congress, "this young boy is the source of more cheer and contentment and wholesome enjoyment than any person living in the United States today." And the members of the House of Representatives, rising to their feet, applauded.

You have heard Seth Parker on the radio—probably you have seen his motion picture—treat yourself now to the pleasure of his book.

SCHOOL TEACHER MYSTERIOUSLY DISAPPEARS ON TEXAS FRONTIER.

While With a Party of Pioneers Searching for Body of Man Whom Indians Had Killed, Aged Man of Letters Is Apparently Swallowed Up by the Earth—Twelve Rangers Defeat a Band of Sixty Comanches in Heroic Hand-to-hand Fight.

The following interesting story of Indian days in this country is taken from an aged newspaper clipping without date or mark of any kind to indicate when it was written. The author, Capt. A. J. Sowell, now deceased, was actively writing frontier stories during the middle nineties and the clipping is probably around 35 years old. August Schreiber, who gave it to us for reprinting, and the John Schreiber, whose murder is therein recorded, was their grandfather, John S. Schreiber.

This writer is glad to reproduce this old record, and has a curiosity to know if the Indian mentioned is the one sent to Austin by the late Joseph Naegelin of Castroville, and if so, what finally became of it. Perhaps the answer would unfold another interesting story. Who can tell it?—Editor.

(By Capt. A. J. Sowell, Ex-Ranger.)

In 1861 a band of Indians came into the settlement near D'Hanis, in Medina county, and stole a lot of horses. Before the people knew they were in the country an old man named John Schreiber went out one morning on a mule to hunt a yoke of oxen. Some time during the day the mule came back without his rider and with an arrow sticking in him. Great excitement prevailed in the settlement, as all believed that the old man had been killed. A crowd assembled at D'Hanis to organize a search for the body and to fight the Indians if they came in contact with them.

These German settlers, who were very particular to comply with the formalities of the law, made arrangements to hold an inquest over the body when found. They had no justice of the peace to act in the capacity of coroner, but Mr. Schalkhausen, their school teacher, was an educated man and they supposed he could hold an inquest as well as anyone. He agreed to go with them, and soon all things were ready. A wagon and team had been procured, and in this the teacher rode with the driver. The balance of the party went on ahead on horseback to search for the body. When they arrived about the place where they supposed the old man had been killed the mounted men separated to hunt, and it was understood that the one who should first find the body of the unfortunate settler would make it known by a loud call to the others.

The Body Is Found.

A man named Deckard first came upon the body and gave the signal. The searchers soon collected on the spot and Chris Batot was sent to inform Mr. Sauter, son-in-law of the man killed, who was in company with the teacher coming in the wagon. When Batot met the wagon and told the news of the finding of the body to Mr. Sauter and how he should drive to reach the spot, he rode back to the assembled crowd. The wagon had passed the spot where the body lay and had to turn back and go up a ravine to get there. This was back towards D'Hanis, and Batot said as he rode off:

"You can see us when you get up the ravine opposite the body."

The driver had only to put on the bridles of the horses and hitch them to the wagon, as the harness had not been removed while waiting for the dead man to be found.

Now a strange and unaccountable thing occurred while Mr. Sauter was bridling the horses: the teacher got out of the wagon and followed Mr. Batot on foot, while the driver carried the wagon up the ravine as instructed. When the wagon arrived the men were around the body ready to hold the inquest, but the teacher had as yet not arrived. After a short period of waiting two men were seen to see what delayed him and in twenty minutes they came back and said that they could not find him.

Had Mysteriously Disappeared.

Fifteen men now set out on horseback and scattered in various directions to search for the man of letters, shouting and shooting for six hours, but no response came from the missing man. He had disappeared as completely as if the earth had opened and swallowed him up.

By this time a cold norther had come upon them and as the men were without coats the search was abandoned. The dead man was placed in the wagon and carried back to D'Hanis and buried without the inquest being held. The body had been lanced and scalped but had not been shot with either bullet or arrow. The wounded mule must have dodged into a thicket and eluded the Indians. The old man had evidently fallen from him or had been dragged off by a limb. The mule came in with saddle and bridle on.

After returning home the men got their coats and some provisions and returned to the scene of the killing, and there searched in wide circles for three days, but without success. The missing man was never seen or heard of by them again. It was surmised that the Indians who had killed Schreiber were concealed nearby watching the searching party, but afraid to attack them, and seeing this man alone and on foot and not armed, captured him and carried him away. It is all shrouded in mystery, however, as it seems that so many men scattering in various directions, some of them would have come upon the Indians even in ambush.

Had No Reason to Leave.

The teacher was a man of 60 years of age, well educated, had a good school, and would have had no occasion to absent himself voluntarily without letting someone know it. Six months after this startling frontier episode, Mr. Deckard, the man who found the body of Mr. Schreiber, was himself killed by Indians under like circumstances. He was out hunting stock and never returned. His body was found after it had been reduced to a skeleton by wolves and vultures, and the bones were put in a sack and carried to D'Hanis and buried.

In 1870 the Indians invaded the west as if they were going to take the whole country. There were Indians everywhere. A company of rangers were stationed at Fort Inge, commanded by Captain Joseph Richarz. Fort Inge was four miles below the present town of Uvalde on the Leona River. News came to the rangers that Indians were stealing horses on Turkey creek, twenty miles west of Uvalde, beyond the Nueces river. There were but sixteen men in camp, two scouts, already being gone, one under Captain Richarz and the other under his lieutenant, Xavier Vance. The only officers in camp were Dr. Woodbridge, company physician and surgeon, and Sergeant Eckford. The doctor took command and at once set out to look for the Indians, leaving only one man in camp. Court was going on in Uvalde, and one of the rangers, Chris Batot, was in attendance as a witness.

Rangers Take the Trail.

The rangers took up the trail of the Indians on Turkey creek and followed its tortuous and scattered way through the chaparral for two days, and then made the discovery that they had lost a man. It was useless to hunt for him in this brushy and uninhabited country, so the scout pushed on to Carrizo Springs. There was a lone ranchman near this place, Captain Levi English, and he said the scout was a long way behind the Indians, as they had passed there two days before. The captain said that if the rangers would take his advice he might tell them of a plan in which they might get a chance to fight the Indians. This was agreed to and English took the men eight miles west, entirely leaving the Indian trail, which was leading south. Here, about dark, Captain English told the men to stop and camp. His idea was that the Indians would again turn north when the raid was over and pass near this place.

Next morning he took two of the rangers and went out to see if there was any sign of the Indians having passed in the night. This left Dr. Woodbridge with twelve men. One hour later he sent two men out on a hill as spies, and in a valley to the south they discovered a large band of Indians coming toward them and driving a herd of horses which they had stolen. The two spies at once put back to camp and informed the doctor of the situation, and he gave orders to saddle and mount. The rangers at this time were armed with Winchester, and thinking they could sustain themselves, boldly advanced with twelve men against the Indians' sixty.

Indians Also Make Charge.

The Comanches had discovered the approach of the rangers and as soon as they got over the ridge they turned and formed for a fight in two lines and came back at a charge and met the white men on the crest of the ridge.

The looks of the Indians and their fearful warwhoops were appalling and two of the rangers ran. Ten stood their ground and met the on-set. The fight was fierce and at close quarters. A gallant ranger, Bedinger, who was in the thickest of the fight, was seen to reel and fall from his horse, and Dr. Woodbridge was struck and knocked from his horse by the Indian chief. The fight seemed hopeless against such odds and the rangers retreated, firing as they went.

Dr. Woodbridge was seen at this juncture standing behind a prickly pear shooting at the chief who was securing the doctor's horse. Two of the rangers, Blakeny and Whitney, went back to his assistance and charged the Indians. The other rangers now made a stand and continued to fire. The two rangers who went to the assistance of Dr. Woodbridge were in the storm center of the fight. No two men, it is thought, ever fired so many shots in so short a space of time. Blakeny's gun became so hot that the barrel burned his hand when he touched it, and all the time during the conflict he and Whitney turned the yell for yell with the Indians. The Comanches had never met such a fire before and did some most dexterous riding and dodging, but nine were seen to fall from their horses.

The Doctor Is Rescued.

Whitney's horse was wounded but still he advanced to the side of the doctor, who was dazed from the blow he had received and was slowly retreating and firing. He succeeded in mounting behind the ranger, who bore him safely back to the other men, the retreat being covered by Blakeny, who continued to yell and fire. The other rangers had formed near and still continued a brisk fire, and the Indians went back.

The Winchesters were all that saved the rangers; they would have been crushed had muzzle-loaders been their arms. The Indians scalped the dead ranger while the fight was going on, as he fell in the hand-to-hand combat, and his body remained among the Indians when the rangers fell back. The men nearly exhausted their supply of cartridges, especially Whitney and Blakeny.

The rangers went back to their camp and next morning a party returned to the scene of the battle and buried the dead ranger. He was hit three times in the breast with bullets. The Indians got his horse, saddle, Winchester, pistol, and belt of cartridges. They also got the doctor's horse, saddle and bridle, but the chief's horse was found dead on the ground. The Indians had carried off their dead, but the bloody ground where they had fought told the tale of what they had suffered.

Escape on Fast Horses.

The same Indians continued their course after the fight and came upon Captain English and the two rangers who went with him to look for the trail and a long running fight took place with them, but they, being on good horses, made their escape. Joe Briery was behind in the chase and fired many shots at the Indians, who also fired many times at him.

The chief's horse, which was killed in the fight, was a gray and well known to the rangers as belonging to a ranchman below. One shield was picked up on the ground; it bore one bullet mark and a woman's scalp. The shield and scalp were sent to Austin. The ranger who got lost while trailing found his way back to camp. Dr. Woodbridge was struck on the back of the neck with a bow and knocked from his horse and he was a long time getting well, his neck swelling badly.

NOT ACCORDING TO SCHEDULE.

By Gloria Brumby.

Precisely at 8 o'clock each evening Rhoda Harcutt brought out her folding card table, placed her chair in position and spread a nice, clean pack of cards upon the table. Precisely at 9 o'clock she stopped playing solitaire, took off her flat-heeled shoes and retired for the evening. This was precisely what she had done for fifteen years, ever since her father, the minister of the Presbyterian Church of Horetton, Massachusetts, had passed on to his reward, leaving the bungalow with the hollyhocks in straight rows and the pansies and geraniums in square beds to his motherless daughter. So long as Rhoda could remember, her life had been strictly according to schedule.

Norma Bailey seated herself on the chair that her friend had discarded. Rhoda had found Norma a real satisfaction to her and was not disturbed at the lateness of the visit. "Just had an impulse to run over," said Norma flippantly. That was Norma's way. Rhoda secretly admired Norma who looked at life flippantly although she was forty-ish.

Outside the stripped trees of early November, the roofs of Horetton, the clock-tower of the High School, and the steeple of what used to be her father's church were clear-cut as an etching, and as Rhoda pulled up the window shade for a moment to look out into the brilliant night she saw the hills shadowy against the pale clarity of the winter sky. Lowering the shade, she moved to the fireplace and placed a large log on the flames. Norma pulled her chair close to the crimson sofa where Rhoda had seated herself. Her dark eyebrows met in an unmistakable frown. "Why the black look?" queried Rhoda, letting down her athen, unbobbed hair. Rhoda had no quarrel with her spinster lot. At least if she had no one knew it.

"For myself I never go out on an impulse," she said, "I do everything like Horetton does, all according to schedule."

"Ordinarily I don't get a chance to indulge in mine either, but with you I can be natural," and Norma Bailey, and the strict disciplinarian became for the rest of the evening, the free agent of thrills and stars and moons. "In school I daren't act on an impulse," she continued, "everything there goes by the time-table."

"That is how this village goes too. Every day we rehearse and do the same things at the same time. Observe the same sights, hear the same sounds. What do you and I expect to hear tomorrow at 3.30, for instance?" And she gave Norma an odd little glance.

Norma laughed. "Why we expect to hear the tinkle of the bell of the ice-cream wagon that waits for the children coming out of school."

"Precisely," replied Rhoda, "and at 6.10?"

"The prolonged whistle of the commuters' train as it pulls into the station. For years and years punctual to the minute."

A spectre of sadness hovered about the room. To both of the women there seemed an emptiness, a hopelessness in their life in Horetton. Norma had come here to teach school after her husband had lost all his money and succumbed to his misfortune, and for a while the ordered life of the town had acted as a balm on her wounded heart. Unlike Norma, Rhoda had no memories of a gayer life, of passionate love, of vacations in Paris and winters in Florida. Horetton had been her destiny. She had grown up according to its schedule. She belonged there, just as the curbs and iron railings belonged.

Suddenly Norma said, "Let's see what's in the cards," and Rhoda opened up the card table. "Such foolishness," she thought with a wan smile, "but one must honor the whims of a beloved guest."

Giving her head a peculiar little twitch, Norma dealt out the cards according to the way of wizardry, then drawing her hands across her eyes and over her rather severe professional coiffure, she intently studied the set of the cards. Rhoda watched the cards closely and experienced lots of electric vibrations in her nervous system.

"I see a change in your schedule, a train not according to the time-table, a meeting, an unusual one"—Rhoda leaned over the card-table—"And a man and a marriage and two babies," she said ironically. Norma ignored the interruption and continued suavely, "Do you wish to ask a question?" Rhoda replied with mock emotion, "What does the future hold for this friend?" "A change of schedule," replied Norma, stacking up the cards neatly.

The dreary November days dragged on to weeks and a month.

Rhoda had done her various errands at Framesby, the nearby big town, stopped at a soda fountain for a milk shake, and stepped out of the store. It was raining now but she had brought her umbrella according to custom these uncertain winter days. The depot was only a few minutes walk. A newspaper boy hurrying to shelter pushed against her and scattered her packages. "Allow me," said a cheery voice over her shoulder, and a short, gray chinchilla arm retrieved her bundles. She looked up gratefully into a pair of dark-rimmed spectacles and breathed her heartfelt thanks.

According to the time-table the 5:40 was late. This was unusual, but Rhoda deposited her packages and umbrella on a seat near the door of the waiting room and sat down. "The train is not running to schedule today," said a voice that Rhoda recognized, and a gloved hand that she knew held a time-table toward her. Rhoda took the time-table and her friend of the fallen bundles rubbed his misty glasses with a prune-colored silk handkerchief.

"That is perfectly true," answered Rhoda, "but in all my life I have never known that train to be late before." "They may have changed the schedule. Such a thing can happen, you know."

"Here she comes now."

"Let me carry your bundles."

A delicious feeling of warmth surged through her whole being as her friend of the adventure seated himself at her side. As he placed the packages on the rack she had noticed that he was well-built, with hair graying at the temples, eyes slightly reddened and just the suspicion of rotundity.

"Not nice weather for a first visit to a town," he said genially.

"It is unlucky. Horetton is very picturesque on a clear night when the moon hovers above the blue hills."

"In a way it is lucky that I did pick tonight to visit my sister."

Rhoda looked interested. "And who is she, may I inquire?"

"Mrs. Norma Bailey, who is principal of the elementary school."

Rhoda started. "Norma is my best friend."

"And I am her brother, Gordon Hastings, already at your service." He coughed slightly through his gloved hand. "I've been a bit of a rolling stone, but have made some money in South Africa and am anxious to catch up the family threads, so am starting with Norma, my favorite sister."

That night Rhoda did not unfold

the card-table, but put on her holiday slippers covered with her galoshes and walked down to Norma's house. She had seldom done this before, but today things had happened that seldom did.

Gordon Hastings opened the door with a welcoming smile and Rhoda, standing in the subdued light of the hallway could just discern the pleasantness of his features. Her heart thumped as she acknowledged his gracious welcome.

"Norma has gone to a teacher's meeting," he said when she was seated beside the fire in the cozy living room.

"That's on her schedule," laughed Rhoda, "but I've changed mine tonight."

"I'm glad of it." There was the noise of a key in the lock outside, but not before Rhoda and Gordon had become very well acquainted.

We asked the McCarthy's

"What's the best reason for having a telephone?" we inquired.

Said Mr. McCarthy:
"You never know when you'll get a business call at home. And during the day, it's a fine thing to know the Missis can call you, if thing's go wrong."

Said Mrs. McCarthy:
"Well, I'll admit I enjoy 'visiting' on the telephone. And it does save a world of trips to the grocery, the drug store, the cleaners and the like. What if we should need the doctor, or the police, or the fire department?"

Perhaps you do not have a telephone at home. If not, we really believe you're missing something. If you're interested, call the business office.

at the Hondo Fair Grounds. A delightful dinner of barbecued mutton, chevon and beef, with all the usual accompaniments, was served at the noon hour, and the afternoon was spent in a renewal of acquaintance one with another, there being visitors present from all over the county and some from beyond its limits. Those who enjoy baseball were entertained by the game between Hondo and D'Hanis at 3 o'clock P. M., and a dance at night closed the event. Owing to the depression and consequent scarcity of money the receipts were not so large as it was hoped for, but otherwise the event was an enjoyable and memorable occasion.

J. E. ALLEN PASSES.

Death came suddenly and all un-awares, like the running down of a clock, to J. E. Allen while he slept Monday afternoon, May 23, 1932. Mr. Allen had not been sick and his death was wholly unexpected. After eating his noon-day meal he retired to his room for an afternoon nap. Not returning at the usual time, two of his grand-children went to call him and found him dead. A physician was summoned, and found he had been dead for about an hour and a half, death having apparently come to him without a struggle while he slept.

John Edward Allen was born in Guadalupe County, Texas, October 16, 1856, he died May 23, 1932, having attained the age of 75 years, 7 months and 7 days. He was married on August 7, 1883, to Miss Tracie Thompson at Leaky, Real County, Texas, but had lived in Medina County for his past 35 years. He is survived by the widow and four children. The children are Mrs. Callie Bendele, Miss Lillian Allen, Mr. W. Clarence Allen and Mrs. H. S. Bulgerin. Four grandchildren also survive.

The remains were buried in Oak-wood cemetery Tuesday, May 24th, Rev. P. E. Lancaster, Pastor of the local Methodist church, conducting the funeral services both at the home and at the grave. A large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends were present to pay their last respects to the departed. Among the mourning friends were the following from out of town: Mrs. Mattie Knight, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Watson, Mrs. Edward Hannich, and A. E. Bulgerin, San Antonio; Mrs. Ella Large, Mrs. John Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Coda Large, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Bendele, and Mrs. E. J. Brice, Leakey; Mr. D. L. Sanson and Vernon Sanson, Banders; Mrs. Chas. Tyler, Sabinal; T. A. Stevenson, Eagle Pass; Mrs. P. M. Koch, and Miss Lena Reinhart, D'Hanis.

It had been the writers privilege to know the deceased for many years. A quiet, unassuming man, was a good, law-abiding citizen; devoted to his family, he will be missed; and departing, his neighbors, friends and loved ones all mourn his passing.

METHODIST REVIVAL SOON TO BEGIN.

The revival, though it happens to be under the auspices of the Metho-dist Church, is by no means meant to be creedal in extent. Every one regardless of faith or order is in- vited to participate and make this their meeting for it is intended to include every one. If you are con- cerned about the Kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ this is a place for you to be co-operating and working for the promotion of His Kingdom.

Should we be so fortunate, as to come into the spirit world of the redeemed souls, we will not be known as Catholic, Jew, Baptist, Methodist or what not, but as the blood washed throng, who have lived out while in the world of Grace, the life of the Great Teacher and come into his inheritance.

The Revival is for the purpose of stimulating our spirit life and helping us into a quickened conscience, that we may know sin and abstain from it, and help sinners to turn from their sins to the way of the Lord. There is not a single individ- ual but what needs the revivifying power of the revival meeting. The ministry stands in need of it, every layman needs to be brought face to face with the holy fire that cleanses, purifies and fills the soul with a burning passion to win individ- uals to God.

Civilization has followed in the trail of a revival of religion, we do well to remind ourselves of the last- ing debt that we owe to the early revival of religion in our country in building moral and spiritual founda- tion for our great American life. It has been the activity of the Christ- ian Church in proclaiming the glori- ous Gospel of Christ, that has lift- ed America to its exalted place among the nations of the World, and caused them to look our way in time of distress and despair. She of all na- tions has been the most active, in the effort to build a world brother- hood.

If our nation is ever brought back to the way of our fathers, if the crime wave, the economic dilemma, the political unrest, the moral lapse, and all the other ails that have blight- ed her progress are righted, it will be as a result of a revival of the Religion of Jesus, a pentecostal Outpouring of God's love and mercy upon the Church.

These spiritual quickenings do not come by accident, but as a result of fasting and prayer on the part of Christian people. The first pen- tecost came when the minds and hearts of that early group, were made as one and their prayer ascended to the Father's throne. The great spiritual awakenings that have followed, have likewise come after consecrated souls have felt the need and prayer and worked for it. God is always ready to send His power and love to bat- tize the lives of His people, when they will acknowledge their need and oeen their lives to Him.

My dear people who chance to read these lines, will you not purpose in your heart to have a part in this re- vival, also a part in helping your community into a relationship with the God of ages that will give them a triumphant certainty of a glori- ous life after this?

Every loyal, home-loving citizen would take up arms in defence of his country against an invader. The greatest enemy of our homes, of our civilization is threatening our down- fall, the cry to arms is sounded. A- wake ye loyal legion, arise to meet the foe, the enemy of your soul is at hand, sin threatens our destruction. Arise in the might of the Lord God of Host, and say Satan must be ban- ished, our homes made secure. In- vite Christ the Lord to enter and take possession of your Life.

Your opportunity is here, come in with the host of those who are con- cerned and who are willing to say to the destroyer of souls: "You shall not pass."

Worship with us Sunday morning and evening.

The revival begins Sunday, June the 5th. P. E. Lancaster.

ST. PAUL'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.

Although vacation days are begin- ning to get into our veins and the lure of the out-of-doors is very tempt- ing, still we see no reason for cur- tailing the program of the Church of Christ. A full program is ahead of us in the coming months at our church. Regular services will be con- ducted. Sunday school and Bible class will convene as usual. We hope that our people and our friends will deem it worthwhile to keep in touch with God and the never-ending work of His Kingdom, by taking part in these divine services.

Some special features for the sum- mer are being planned. One is the confirmation of the junior member- ship training class to be held in the beginning of July. The pastor is al- so planning to instruct an adult class preparatory for church membership. The members are asked to use their influence in every possible manner to gain members for this class. Those who attend the series of lectures are in no way obligated either to become confirmed or join our church. We shall aim to show you the way of sal- vation as taught by the Word of God. It is for you to decide for your- self after that. We hope to start this class after the Juniors have been confirmed.

Several social and entertainment features are being arranged for the summer.

Next Sunday there will be English service in the morning at 10:30 and Sunday school and Bible class at 9:15. The night service will be held at 8 o'clock. The choir will enhance the service in the morning by render- ing the opening sentence, "The Lord Is In His Holy Temple", in a beauti- ful arrangement, and singing two an- them. We extend a welcome to you to worship with us.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet on Wednesday, June 1, at the home of Mrs. W. Leibfarth. All members should plan to be present.

The meeting of the Luther League will be held Sunday, June 5, at 7 P. M.

BAPTIST NEWS NOTES.

The Baptists are to have special day next Sunday. The entire mem- bership are urged to be present. Please, brethren and sisters, make this a Sunday school and church- going day. A letter to the church, from the Pastor will be read. It is desired that you hear this letter. And, take it to heart, as it comes from the Pastor's heart. The Bible School lesson will be on Joseph the Dreamer. Brother M. J. Scott will teach this lesson; and Brother Scott will also preach at the 11 o'clock hour. You will want to be present and worship with the rest and before the Lord. Some announcement from the dea- cons may be made, of importance to our Church life. Hear it.

Surely since we wish God to be good to us, we will be good to Him. We need Him every day; but when life's Sunset comes, as surely it will then our hearts will cry to Him for mercy and for help. Don't forget to listen to the Pastor's letter.

There will be no service at night. Pastor.

When PAIN Comes

WHAT many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes the acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water neutralizes instantly many times that much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go, get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drug store.

COOPERATIVE MARKETING ACT VALID.

Sir:

In the trial of the suit involving the anti-trust laws in the district court here recently, Judge J. D. Moore upheld the constitutionality of the anti-trust laws.

Since that time representations have been made in certain sources to the effect that as a result of this decision the Cooperative Marketing Act of 1921 was unconstitutional and therefore, it would be the duty of the Attorney General to prosecute the members of such cooperative marketing associations.

These statements are not true. In fact, it is exactly the contrary.

In view of the wide interest in the matter and of the fact that many individual members of cooperative associations of all kinds in this state are affected, I desire to call to your attention the following statement which I made recently to County Attorney Bryan Blalock of Travis county:

"Farmers, dairymen, and other members of cooperative marketing associations organized under the Act of 1921, are not subject to prosecution or to suit for penalties under the anti-trust laws of the state.

You are correct in your statement that Judge J. D. Moore, in district court here, upheld the constitutionality of the anti-trust laws and ruled the attorneys for the oil companies who claimed that the anti-trust laws had been invalidated by the passage of the Cooperative Marketing Act of 1921.

In attacking the anti-trust laws, the oil companies really launched an attack upon the cooperative marketing act by asserting that the classification of farmers, dairymen, livestock raisers and other producers who become members of such associations was an unreasonable classification and discriminatory. The records reflect that we urged, on the contrary, that the classification was reasonable one and the exemption, therefore, proper. We expressly asked the Court to uphold both the anti-trust laws and the cooperative marketing act.

"When he handed down his decision, Judge Moore did not make any statement as to his reasons therefor, but we interpret it as upholding our position that the cooperative marketing act of 1921 as well as the anti-trust laws, are valid and constitutional."

Thirty years ago it was successfully urged in the Supreme court of the United States that the classification of the farmer and livestock raiser was not a reasonable one, but since have changed and the views of the courts have also undergone a change. In more than forty states the Union, the legislatures have passed cooperative marketing acts, and the courts of last resort in those states have uniformly held that all now recognize as being indisputable—that there is a vast difference between farmers and producers on the one hand, and the great corporations seeking to fix prices on the other."

Sincerely yours,
James V. Allred,
Attorney General.

ABOUT LLANO COUNTY.

Fletcher's Farming:

I wish to say something about our superb western county, of which there is little known—Llano and her resources and possibilities. It is a land of mountains and valley, prairies and forests, springs and rivulets. Our farmers produce a variety of crops, such as corn, cotton, wheat, oats and all kinds of fruit, pecans, walnuts, berries, etc. It is the stockman's paradise. Sheep, goats, cattle and horses thrive the year round on the native grasses with very little attention besides marking and branding. Hogs run out on the free range and fatten on the mast; only feed a little corn at killing time. We have millions of dollars invested in industrial development. We have six granite cutting plants, one of which cost $100,000. The granite industry employs 250 men, and Llano is the gateway to Hamilton Dam, where six million dollars will be expended in its construction. And the mining man is in his element here. The U. S. Geological report gives Llano County 106 different kinds of minerals, and says it is the most mineralized county in the United States. We have the only gold mine in active operation in Texas. The Llano region has been a lure for the gold seekers since the early days of Texas, when the old Franciscan monks held sway over the country. Gold does not manufacture itself; it exists in the bosom of the earth in the yellow sparkle of the sands. It takes skillful and experienced prospectors to find it, for gold is where you find it. These batholith mountains and sandy creeks in Llano county may produce billions of gold, enough to relieve the depression; for it is a well known fact that previous depressions have been cured by a gold-rush. The depression of 1895 was relieved by the gold-rush to Klondike, and the 1907 panic was cured by the discovery of gold at Tonopah and Goldfield. And where will the next big gold-rush be? Who knows? It may be in Llano County.

We have similar structure and formation as the famous Black Hills of South Dakota, the greatest gold producing section in the world. It would be a great honor to the State of Texas to have the depression relieved by a gold-rush to Llano County, Texas.

Respectfully,
C. H. BRAME.

In applying paradichlorobenzene to peach trees to control borers, first remove trash, grass, and stones for about a foot around the tree trunk and smooth the soil. Put the paradichlorobenzene crystals in a ring about 1 1-2 inches wide and 1 1-2 inches from the trunk and cover them with clean soil, packing it up around the tree to form a mound. Put the ring of crystals above the topmost borer gallery. Apply 3-4 ounce per tree to trees 4 or 5 years old and remove the mounds and crystals after four weeks. For older trees, use 1 ounce per tree, leaving the material around the tree six weeks.

CENTPEDE GRASS FOR WINTER GARDEN LAWNS.

That centipede grass is outstanding as a lawn grass for the Winter Garden region is indicated by a test of seventeen lawn grasses at the Winter Garden Experiment Station. Centipede grass has been more drought resistant than the other grasses tested and is known to withstand considerable frost. It is dark green in color, and requires very little mowing. It is propagated by cuttings and does not make seed in the Winter Garden.

This is a Chinese grass which was introduced some years ago and is very generally planted in Florida.

Why not have Tuesday for wash day? ## FOR THE BEEKEEPER.

A man from Rustburg, Va., bewails the fact that as soon as a remark is made about bees someone has to make a would-be humorous remark about stings. How different with a cow. Mention a cow and everyone thinks about milk, butter and cheese. Then the thoughtful, impassive demeanor of a cow is referred to. Last of all its horns. Good greatness! What is the difference? I, for one, would keep bees if the whole blamed world would be shaking with fear, and if their stings were an inch in length.

It has been figured out by some Smartie that if each of the 800,000 beekeepers of the U. S. would eat a 1-4 pound of honey per day, they would consume 100 tons of honey in a year. That would be that much honey off the market. Very good! As a general thing when you eat a meal at a beekeeper's home molasses or corn syrup is fed to you.

A Michigan writer says that he eats honey three times a day. He notices in consequence that his health has improved and that his teeth do not decay any more as they used to do.

For our April report we must still say that the prospects for 1932 honey are rather slim. That hard freeze in March, and subsequent dry windy weather, gave us but little bloom and bees are not storing honey yet. Most colonies are comparatively weak. Feeding with honey or sugar syrup at the proper time would have put bees into a better mood, but, few beekeepers had enough honey or sufficient surplus cash to do that.

Futhermore, I must say that two of these northern Yankees have run upon a way to wrap comb honey in cellophane and paraffine on a paste-board base. I got a sample of two dozen cartons of same and placed them in a local store, and it certainly sold. Since that I sold some more to the same store. We cut the honey out of a regular shallow extracting frame, making four equal size chunks, wrap same in cellophane and dip the side that has the folded ends of the cellophane into melted paraffine wax and stick same quickly on a paste-board base. The blocks look good, are easy to handle, and sell some five times faster than bottled honey. I consider this the very best honey selling help.

Mr. Sturdevant of St. Paul, Neb., says that he has found a way to sell granulated comb honey by cutting same into squares of about 3 ounces each and selling same to the cafe and candy trade. Why not? Also comb honey not granulated, cut in similar small squares, nicely wrapped in cellophane could undoubtedly be sold through the above mentioned trade quite effectively.

A Nebraska bee writer rakes me over the coals for differing with some of these would-be bee masters who, continuously and at the top of their voices, are describing certain bee diseases. I cannot understand why the whole world, (most of them not interested) should have this burning up of bee hives idea dinned into their ears. Says he that dirty honey houses run away more customers into the arms of beemen at a distance than any other cause. It should be considered by said poor dyspeptic that honey houses should be scrupulously clean if you expect to sell the honey packed therein. But the honey buying public should not buy from a distant beekeeper, whose honey house they never see, to the detriment of their neighbor whom they know, and whose packing plant they can investigate at any time.

The mesquite tree has been a wonderful yielder of honey in some apiaries lately; the honey is of a light color, has a good aroma, heavy body and should please the buyer.

Mr. Waldo Horton of Winter Haven, Fla., thinks that a beeman will have to make a 50,000 pound crop and get at least 4 cents per pound in order to make as much net money as an ordinary bank clerk, or a good mechanic. And that means 100 pounds per colony from 500 colonies every year. If a beekeeper does not deserve that much, then he asks to be excused for speaking. We excuse you, Mr. Horton; not because we think that the beeman is not worth it, but more because not all beemen live in Southern Florida, many living in a semi-desert and they run a chance in making a crop, and again in getting a price for what they do get.

The praising of the Caucasian bees is still persisted in by many beemen who, perhaps, have that particular strain of bees for sale. During the last 12 month I had often wished that all my bees were Cyprians with a 4 inch stinger, and a determination to use same to a finish, asking no quarter and not wishing to give any. We wish the bees to sting everybody into the run who bothers them.

The same Michigan party tells me to read this: My wife's uncle at Ann Harbor, Mich., had diabetes. His doctor advised honey. That was a number of years ago. Since that time he has never tasted sugar. All the cooking and sweetening is done with honey. Now he has chased diabetes over the fence and is a well man. Dr. Street, who used to live in Wheeler, used to keep bees. No matter what was the matter with his patients he always removed honey from their diet. He was always warning his patients not to eat honey. Still he had honey to sell. Where he sold it I do not know but surely he did the beekeepers no good. He died with diabetes and cancer.

cream concern in San Antonio, Texas, launched a new kind of frozen sweet, called Milk Frost. Great promises were made as to the use of much honey, and now they claim of having used 100,000 pounds of honey in the making of said Milk Frost. It would be interesting to hear from the beeman who sold the honey.

A real bargain awaits many of the citizens of Medina County who need Life Insurance protection for their dependent ones. This protection is offered by the HOME RELIEF ASSOCIATION of Medina County, on a plan that you cannot duplicate for cost outside of Medina County. Insurance is protection and a good investment. The Home Relief Association is offering to the citizens of Medina County a certificate that is worth $1000.00 at this time (which is the limit of benefit allowed). The Association has been in operation for twelve years and has had only 40 deaths since it was organized, 4 of these were in 1931 and only 1 death so far this year. If you desire Insurance for a small expenditure of money you should join the Home Relief Association. This low cost at this time should appeal to all. $40.00 in twelve years for death assessments is very cheap for the protection had. There are over 1100 members in the Association at this time and new members are being added. If you need Life Insurance (and most everyone does) you should make application for membership in this association one that is operated by Home people of Medina County. This Association is being operated by authority of the Insurance Commission of the State of Texas which is a protection to the policy holders. The association has a surplus mortuary fund which is growing with each death assessment and belongs to the membership of the association. Now is the accepted time to join, there is danger in delay. We solicit your membership.

ZION'S LUTHERAN CHURCH NOTES.

Sunday school begins in Zion's Lutheran church Sunday morning at 9 o'clock. All boys and girls are cordially invited to be present.

At 10 o'clock A. M. divine service in the German tongue. All are always welcome at all services in this church.

The Baccalaureate service held in Zion Lutheran church last Sunday night was largely attended, the church hardly being large enough to seat all present. The sermon of the occasion was preached by Rev. C. P. Hasskari of Quilhi. The speaker's text was John 9, 4: "I must work the works of Him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work." The sermon was directed to both the graduates as well as to all men and women present, and urged that all should realize that to work is a divine command and the basis of all success, welfare and happiness in this world.

Sunday, June 5th, will be a gala day for Zion Lutheran congregation of Castroville, the occasion being the examination of the largest catechetical class ever instructed in this church. On the following Sunday, June 12th, this class will be confirmed according to the beautiful rites of the Lutheran church. A cordial invitation to these services is extended to all.

WOMAN'S WISH TO DIE IN HER HOME REALIZED.

The last wish of Mrs. Joe Naegelin, 78, that she might die in her home at Castroville, was fulfilled early this morning when she died there.

Mrs. Naegelin was a life-long resident of Castroville and the mother of Otto Naegelin, Castroville postmaster, and of August Naegelin, local contractor.

She died of complications resulting from a broken hip, which she suffered three weeks ago when she slipped and fell in her residence at Castroville. She was under treatment at a local hospital for three weeks but her condition grew steadily worse until attending physicians gave up hope. Mrs. Naegelin then expressed the wish that she might die in her home. She was removed there yesterday.

Funeral services will be held at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning and burial will be in the Castroville cemetery.

Survivors include two daughters, Mrs. Anna Tschirhart and Mrs. Anton Kilhorn of Castroville, and five sons, August of San Antonio, Otto, Willie, Henry, Joe and John of Castroville; four grandchildren and one great-grandson.--San Antonio Evening News.
